

My Pledge

Lions Light Academy is a co-op. My parents teach here, they volunteer here, and nobody is paid. Everyone chose to be here — including me.

What I will do

☐ I will do my homework carefully and finish it, even when it's hard.

That is what diligence means.

☐ I will show up ready, and I will try.

☐ I will follow the adults in this building.

☐ I will speak and act in a way that respects the people around me.

☐ I will stay with my group and in the room I belong in.

☐ I will try the harder version when I'm asked.

☐ I will clean up, and leave every space better than I found it.

What I understand

☐ Learning is my work. My teachers teach it and my parents support it, but nobody can do it for me.

☐ If I come without my work, I may be sent to finish it. The first time is not a punishment — nothing is written down and I am not in trouble. I finish it and I come back. But twice in a row, without a real reason, is a pattern — and that is a strike.

☐ Small things get corrected in the moment. Nobody keeps a list.

☐ Other things are strikes too — repeating something after I've been corrected, or being disrespectful.

Strike one — my parents hear about it, in writing.

Strike two — the same again.

Strike three — we all sit down together: me, my parents, my teacher and leadership. Not to decide whether I come back. To work out how.

☐ Strikes count across every class and reset each year. If I finish the plan I sign, my count goes back to zero.

☐ Anything unsafe — hurting someone, threatening someone — happens immediately. No warnings, and my parents are called that day.

☐ If life gets hard, I can tell my teacher. They know me and they have room for that. A rough week every week isn't the same thing, and I know the difference.

I have read this. I understand it. I am choosing to keep it.
